Dear Mr. Brown,

For the long-term protection of the environment, the Board must ensure that coal ash is not left in contact with water. Old impoundments must not be simply capped off in place. The potential contamination of groundwater, and ultimately, drinking water, is a large public health danger.

Transparency and accountability are of utmost importance to the public. Interested persons in the community must have access to documentation regarding the disposition of coal ash, and a voice in protecting the environment from toxic chemicals.

Thank you.
