Good Day,

I wanted to briefly voice my support for the rules that are being suggested by environmental organizations concerning Coal Combustion Residuals. Ground water and rivers are being polluted right now as coal ash sits next to rivers and the run off from rains goes into the rivers. The same kind of pollution is true in coal ash ponds where run off seeps into ground water aquifers. Coal ash needs to be removed from any potentially wet areas like flood plains. Variances and exemptions have no place when health harming materials are involved. Thanks for taking my comment.
