Letter From the Chairman

Census 2000, the information cornerstone for the next century and the largest peace-time mobilization in U.S. history, is about to begin and you are needed to make it a success. In Executive Order Nineteen, Governor Ryan requested that each state agency alert their constituencies about the importance of the upcoming census and its impact on Illinois.

Billions of federal, state, and local dollars will be spent on thousands of projects across our nation and each state's census information will determine how these moneys will be spent. For example, allocation decisions about public transportation, traffic control, education, health care, job training, and business development are based on each state's profile. But government officials aren't the only ones who will use Census 2000 data. Senior citizen groups often draw on statistics from the census to support the construction of community centers. Nonprofit organizations use census numbers to estimate the potential pool of volunteers in their communities. Developers analyze census data before deciding where to locate new business ventures. Census statistics help determine where to build more roads, stoplights, hospitals, health clinics, and child-care centers.

The information gathered from Census 2000 will also impact Illinois' environment and our State's environmental initiatives. Census data will not only be used to study environmental issues like urban sprawl, but it will also be used to gain a better understanding of our State's changing population and how government agencies like the Board can better serve the people of Illinois.

Census 2000 is your chance to make sure that the new century in Illinois begins with an accurate and complete picture of our State. Your contacts, your knowledge, and your concern about Illinois' communities are the keys to an accurate census, and that is why Illinois needs you to start spreading the word about the importance of Census 2000. Set the record straight by dispelling the myths about confidentiality and the uses of the census. Reassure others that Census 2000 is confidential and that the information collected is protected by law. Emphasize why the information collected in the census is important to Illinois' communities.

The Census Bureau also needs your help in recruiting census takers in every neighborhood across Illinois and the nation. Spread the word about census jobs to your family, friends, and associates. The Census Bureau needs to hire a large number of workers who are conversant with the many languages spoken in our State and across the United States. There is a toll free number for census jobs. To apply or for more information please call 1-888-325-7733 or visit their website at (<http://www.census.gov/jobs2000/www/index.html>).

As always, thank you for your participation.

Yours,

Federal Update

United States Environmental Protection Agency Adopts Tier 2 Motor Vehicle Emissions Standards and Gasoline Sulfur Control Requirements

On February 10, 2000, the United States Environmental Protection Agency (USEPA) adopted standards that finalize a major program implementing the Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990 (42 U.S.C. §§ 7401 et seq. (1996)) which is designed to significantly reduce the emissions from new passenger cars and light trucks, including pickup trucks, vans, minivans, and sport-utility vehicles. 65 Fed. Reg. 6698 (February 10, 2000). The program is a comprehensive regulatory initiative that treats vehicles and fuels as a system, combining requirements for much cleaner vehicles with requirements for much lower levels of sulfur in gasoline. The USEPA believes that these reductions will provide for cleaner air and greater public health protection, primarily by reducing ozone and particulate matter pollution.

Highlights of the program include the phased-in application of the same set of emission standards covering passenger cars, light trucks, and large SUVs starting in 2004. The program also introduces a new category of vehicles, "medium-duty passenger vehicles," bringing larger passenger vans and SUVs into the Tier 2 program. During the phase-in period, interim fleet emission average standards that match or are more stringent than current federal and California Low-Emission Vehicle Phase I standards will be applied.

The regulations apply the same standards to vehicles operated on any fuel. The program sets more stringent particulate matter and evaporative emission standards. For commercial gasoline, the USEPA reports that the program will significantly reduce average gasoline sulfur levels nationwide as early as 2000. Refiners will generally have to add refining equipment to remove sulfur in their refining processes. The reduction in sulfur levels will also contribute directly to cleaner air in addition to its beneficial effects on vehicle emission control systems. Importers of gasoline will be required to import and market only gasoline meeting the sulfur limits. The regulations also introduce an averaging, banking, and trading program to provide flexibility for refiners and ease implementation of the gasoline sulfur control program.

The USEPA expects a reduction in oxides of nitrogen emissions of at least 856,000 tons per year by 2007 and 1,236,000 tons per year by 2010, the time frame when many states will have to demonstrate compliance with air quality standards that will result from the implementation of these regulations. Emission reductions are expected to continue increasing for many years, reaching at least 2,220,000 tons per year in 2020. In addition, the program is designed to reduce the contribution of vehicles to other serious public health and environmental problems, including volatile organic compounds, particulate matter, regional visibility problems, toxic air pollutants, acid rain, and nitrogen loading of estuaries. The reductions, and their resulting environmental benefits, are expected to come at an average cost increase of less than $100 per passenger car, an average cost increase of less than $200 for light trucks, an average cost increase of about $350 for medium-duty passenger vehicles, and an average increase of less than 2 cents per gallon of gasoline, or about $120 over the life of an average vehicle.

After the USEPA rules become effective, the Board would anticipate receipt of a similar proposal from the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency for promulgation under the "fast-track" provisions of Section 28.5 of the Illinois Environmental Protection Act (415 ILCS 5/28.5 (1998)). The regulations become effective April 10, 2000. For further information contact: Carol Connell at 734/214-4349; e-mail: connell.carol@epa.gov

United States Environmental Protection Agency Proposes Deferral of Phase IV Standards for PCBs as an Underlying Hazardous Constituent in Soil

On February 16, 2000, the United States Environmental Protection Agency (USEPA) proposed amendments to temporarily defer a portion of the rule applying Land Disposal Restrictions (LDR) under the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act (RCRA) to underlying hazardous constituents (UHC) in soils contaminated with certain characteristic hazardous wastes for metals. 65 Fed. Reg. 7809 (February 16, 2000). The USEPA promulgated the rule applying LDR under RCRA to UHC in contaminated soils on May 26, 1998.

The USEPA is proposing to temporarily defer the requirement that polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) be considered a action because the regulation appears to be discouraging generators from cleaning up contaminated soils, which is contrary to what the USEPA intended when it promulgated alternative treatment standards for contaminated soils. In addition, the USEPA needs more time to restudy the issue of appropriate treatment standards for metal-contaminated soils which also contain PCBs as UHC.

The pendency of the USEPA amendments may be addressed in the Board's currently pending identical-in-substance proposal for public comment, In the Matter of: RCRA Subtitle C Hazardous Waste Update, USEPA Amendments (July 1, 1999, through December 31, 1999), R00-13. If the USEPA takes action before the close of the record in R00-13, the Phase IV Standards may be included in the Board's rulemaking docket R00-13. United States Environmental Protection Agency Reopens Comment Period for the Proposed Rule for Standards for Pesticide Containers and Containment

On February 24, 2000, the United States Environmental Protection Agency (USEPA) reopened the comment period on the proposed rule "Standards for Pesticide Containers and Containment" (59 Fed. Reg. 6712 (February 11, 1994)) for an additional 30 days until March 20, 2000. 65 Fed. Reg. 9234 (February 24, 2000). On October 21, 1999 (64 Fed. Reg. 56918), the USEPA reopened the comment period to obtain comment on four specific issues.

The October 21, 1999 notice solicited comments on potential changes that would reduce the scope of the container standards, add an exemption for certain antimicrobial pesticides, and adopt some of the Department of Transportation hazardous materials regulations. That notice also requested comments on the definition of small business, used to identify small pesticide formulators, agrochemical dealers and commercial pesticide applicators in the small entity impact analysis.

For further information contact: Nancy Fitz at 703/305-7385; e-mail: fitz.nancy@epa.gov

The Illinois pesticide program is established by the Illinois Pesticide Act (IPA) (415 ILCS 60/1 et seq. (1998)). The IPA is administered by the Department of Agriculture and is enforced by the Department of Public Health and the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency.

Rule Update

Board Dismisses Three Reserved Identical-In-Substance Rulemaking Dockets, R00-9, R00-12, and R00-14

On February 17, 2000, the Board dismissed three reserved identical-in-substance rulemaking dockets in In the Matter of: Definition of VOM Update, USEPA Regulations (July 1, 1999, through December 31, 1999), R00-9; In the Matter of: RCRA Subtitle D Municipal Solid Waste Landfill Update, USEPA Amendments (July 1, 1999, through December 31, 1999), R00-12; and In the Matter of: UST Update, USEPA Amendments (July 1, 1999, through December 31, 1999), R00-14. The United States Environmental Protection Agency (USEPA) did not amend its regulations during the period from July 1, 1999, through December 31, 1999, in any way that would necessitate corresponding Board action to amend the Illinois regulations. Section 7.2 of the Environmental Protection Act (Act) (415 ILCS 5/7.2 (1998)) requires the Board to adopt regulations which are "identical in substance" to regulations adopted by the USEPA. The term "identical in substance" is defined at Section 7.2 of the Act (415 ILCS 5/7.2 (1998)).
