Dear Clerk Brown,

I am writing in response to the IEPA's comments on the IPCB docket. I am extremely disappointed that the IEPA is choosing to not recommend the adoption of the Clean Vehicle Standards. Public health and climate change are issues that the government must address immediately. As a young person in the state, I want Illinois and the USA to be leaders in electric vehicles instead of emitting toxic diesel pollution into our air.

Diesel pollution affects all of us but it especially affects those who live close to highways, ports, and warehouses. Every day we do not adopt these standards, we are CHOOSING to expose people to carcinogens and pollution. A brighter, cleaner future is possible.

Every day I see trucks and cars drive by my home and spew black smoke into the air. I love to be outside and walk and it makes me extremely angry that the people inside the polluting vehicles have cleaner air than those outside.

The public has the right to have a clean and healthy environment and that includes our air. Please adopt these standards!

Signed,
Peter Chung
