Section 1 – Background of Proposed Illinois EPA Water Temperature Standards

The Illinois Environmental Protection Agency (“Illinois EPA”) has proposed to redesignate uses of the Chicago Area Waterway System, and revise water quality standards, including the water quality standards for temperature. See Proposed 35 Ill. Admin. Code Parts 302 and 303.

Currently, Corn Products’ Argo Plant (“Argo”) is subject to thermal discharge limitations for Sanitary & Ship Canal water used by the plant for noncontact cooling.

The Sanitary & Ship Canal water provides cooling for a variety of heat sources within Corn Products’ processes, with the amount needed based on production rate and product mix. There are approximately 36 operations in the plant that use Sanitary & Ship Canal water for cooling. The volume of Sanitary & Ship Canal water that will be used for cooling varies based on the number of process units in service at any given time.

The proposed revisions would result in the Corn Products’ wet milling operation in Argo having to comply with water quality standards for Chicago Area Waterway System and Brandon Pool Aquatic Life Use B waters, with period averages and daily maximums not to exceed the limits set forth in the following table:

Month – Dates	Period Average (°F)	Daily Maximum (°F)

Section 2 – Possible Technical Alternatives

There were four technical options considered with regard to the use of Sanitary & Ship Canal water for process cooling. The options include:

1. Current Use Case
2. Single Sanitary & Ship Canal Water Cooling Tower
3. Unit Specific Closed Loop Cooling with Several Smaller Cooling Towers
4. Mechanical Cooling in Conjunction with Option 2

Option 1. The current use case, maintains the status quo. Corn Products' corn wet milling operation at Argo would continue to use Sanitary & Ship Canal water as a cooling media for part of the process heat transfer scheme. Sanitary & Ship Canal water use will range from approximately 20,000 gallons per minute up to a maximum observed use of approximately 44,500 gallons per minute.

In this case, Corn Products would not be able to use Sanitary & Ship Canal water as a source for process cooling as dictated by equipment design and production demand. Based on the available historical data, the water returned to the Sanitary & Ship Canal after use in the Corn Products process would exceed the proposed temperature limits during some averaged periods as well as some daily limits throughout a typical year.

This case documents that some financial burden on Corn Products will result due to capital investment and increased costs for ongoing operations and maintenance resulting from the addition of new equipment to maintain its continued use by achieving compliance with the proposed standards.

The second alternative is the addition of a single cooling tower to cool water after the process heat has been transferred to the cooling water, but prior to its return to the Sanitary & Ship Canal. The main Sanitary & Ship Canal water supply and return header is 42"φ. A suitable location on the Argo site in Bedford Park was chosen to install a cooling tower sized for peak flow of 45,000 gallons per minute. The cooling tower and associated pumps and piping will need proper foundations and supports. In addition to Sanitary & Ship Canal water, instrument air and electrical service will need to be supplied to the new cooling tower system. This equipment would also require installation of a structural steel rack for routing of utility piping and electrical service in conduits.

Cooling towers rely on evaporative cooling along with some sensible heat transfer due to intimate contact with air for removal of heat. There is a practical limit based on the area of the country chosen for the cooling tower installation. This limit is based on the wet bulb temperature of the area. The assessment of cooling tower effectiveness is based on wet bulb temperatures recorded at Midway Airport in Chicago, Illinois.

Due to the volume of Sanitary & Ship Canal water, the cost of purchasing and installing a cooling tower is high. The known, accepted wet bulb temperature data for Chicago Midway along with expected cooling tower performance indicate that there are times of the year when the period average will still be exceeded.

This alternative has a high capital cost along with additional on-going operating and maintenance costs. In addition, even with this expenditure, the proposed temperature period average limits will still be exceeded. Therefore, this option was not considered a reasonable alternative.

Alternative 3 reduces the temperature of water returned to the Sanitary & Ship Canal by implementing a closed loop cooling scheme for process heat removal. The closed loop cooling scheme would consist of multiple cooling towers located within the process battery limits in order to provide service to the process heat exchangers.

It is reasonable to anticipate that the capital, operating and maintenance costs to implement this scheme would be higher than the single Sanitary & Ship Canal water cooling tower plan. For the estimated 36 process cooling loads, it is expected that approximately 12 smaller cooling towers would be required. The capital cost would be higher due to the cost of purchasing multiple towers, installation of equipment in multiple water basins and routing of utility piping and electrical service to different points throughout the plant as opposed to a single location.

In addition to the cooling tower equipment installation costs, additional capital equipment costs would likely be incurred to change expensive process heat exchange equipment. The change in the process heat exchange equipment would be driven by the new cooling water inlet conditions.

As a result of high capital costs, increases in on-going operating and maintenance costs along with unknown technical impacts on the process, this option was not considered a reasonable alternative.

The fourth alternative involves the installation of a mechanical cooling system in conjunction with the single cooling tower discussed in the second option. Mechanical cooling would be accomplished with the addition of a refrigerant compressor and evaporator system. Like the closed loop cooling scheme, mechanical cooling adds significant complexity.

Based on the heat balance calculations presented in Section 3, it is anticipated that approximately 12,375 tons of mechanical cooling would be required to achieve period average temperature limits. In addition to the investment in the cooling tower installation, significant capital would be required for this type of refrigeration system. This type of equipment would also require construction of a building to provide shelter from the weather.

As a result of the high capital costs along with increases in on-going operating and maintenance costs, this option was not considered a reasonable alternative.

Section 3 – Discussion of Proposed Cooling Tower Alternative

A single point of heat removal cooling tower was investigated for technical and financial feasibility as the most reasonable option for reducing Sanitary & Ship Canal water temperature prior to return back to the Sanitary & Ship Canal. This option was selected for further investigation over the other investment cases for two primary reasons. The first reason is that this was the method for heat removal suggested by Illinois EPA as technically feasible and economically reasonable. January 28, 2008 Hearing Transcript, In the Matter of: Water Quality Standards and Effluent Limitations for the Chicago Area Waterway System and the Lower Des Plaines River Proposed Amendment to 35 Ill. Adm. Code 301, 302, 303 and 304, R08-9, p. 54-55, 67 (Ill.Pol.Control.Bd. Feb. 7, 2008). The second reason is that the other investment case solutions are more complex, likely resulting in higher capital investment and life cycle costs.

a. Selection of Periods for the Sanitary & Ship Canal Water Thermal Analysis:

The system operation logs from 12/1/2003 to 11/30/2007 were analyzed to verify the maximum heat rejection to the Sanitary & Ship Canal water system during 17 periods in a 12 month span as Illinois EPA Regulations require.

b. Calculation Method:

Sum of Daily Million btuH Q in each period was compared with the same periods in the 4 year span (from 12/1/2003 to 11/30/2007) to verify the period with the heaviest loading:

$$Q = \text{Sigma} (M * ((T_{dd-\text{Max}}) - (T_{di-\text{max}})) * 500 / 1,000,000)$$

Where:

T<sub>dd-max</sub>: Daily Max Discharge Temperature (F)

T<sub>di-max</sub>: Daily Max Inlet Water Temperature (F)

M: Daily Avg Water Flow Rate (gpm)

Q: btuH (not btuDay) / 1,000,000

The HISTORICAL DATA worksheet included in the Corn Products furnished DMR Aspen Flow Calculator file was used for this calculation.

Since the average discharge water temperatures are available from 2/24/2005 to 11/30/2007, and average Sanitary & Ship Canal water temperatures are not available, daily maximum discharge and Sanitary & Ship Canal water temperatures are used in selecting the 17 design periods covering a 12 month annual period.

(Please refer to Historical_Peak Periods worksheet included in Peak Months_ 4 Years_040409 CC.xls.)

For the periods when the cooling water demands are diminished below 1,000 gpm, the heat load has been eliminated from the calculation.

i. Daily Average and maximum Wet Bulb Temperatures for Chicago Midway Airport:

NOAA weather data (hourly wet bulb temperatures recorded for Chicago Midway Airport from 1/1/1998 to 12/31/2007), along with the tabulations for daily average, maximum and minimum wet bulb temperatures for each month for a period of 1998 through 2007 were evaluated for this calculation.

The projected average and maximum cooling tower discharge (leaving) water temperatures were calculated for the selected peak thermal load periods using the same daily average and maximum wet bulb temperatures in the weather data.

(Please refer to Years 2004 thru 2007 worksheets included in CPI_Midway WetBulbTemp_Stats-Siil_040609.xls for the daily average, maximum and minimum wet bulb temperatures, which were used in the calculations.)

ii. Cooling Tower Performance Tables:

The base performance table of the planned cooling tower was obtained from Maddox Industries (Chicago Area Rep for Marley Cooling Towers) using the Marley Model (ID 38) 664-5-3.

Due to insufficient coverage of the cooling tower performance data provided by Marley, a portion of the operating performance outside the range of coverage was approximated by extrapolating the base data. In addition, a portion of the cooling tower performance data provided by Marley did not cover specific points within the range of coverage. This data was obtained by interpolating the performance data provided by Marley.

(Please refer to Marley Performance_040409 CC.xls for the projected cooling tower performance, which was used in the calculations.)

iii. Period Average and Daily Maximum Water Temperatures:

The Corn Products furnished spreadsheet file (DMR Aspen Flow Calculator) has been used in order to calculate the Period Average and Daily Maximum Water Temperatures.

The Daily Maximum Water Temperatures were verified using the highest WB temperature, and the maximum discharge water temperature (not corresponding discharge water temperature to the same day for the highest WB temperature).

If the Daily Maximum Water Temperatures are calculated using the maximum discharge water temperature on the day when the highest WB temperature occurs for each period, the results will be 2°F to 3°F lower than the estimated daily maximum water temperature profile.

For the period average water temperature calculation, the corresponding average wet bulb temperature was used for each period.

iv. 24 Hour maximum and Average Water Temperatures:

Under the Historical Data Worksheet of DMR Aspen Flow Calculator file, the 24 hour maximum discharge temperatures are listed for all dates (from 9/26/03 to 12/1/07), but the 24 hour average discharge temperatures are listed for a period (2/23/05 thru 12/1/07) only.

The 24 hour average discharge temperatures for the missing period (from 9/26/03 to 2/22/05) have been estimated using the differences between the average <24 hour maximum discharge water temperatures> and average <24 hour average discharge water temperatures> for the same periods, which are listed the Historical Data Worksheet from 9/26/03 to 12/1/07.

c. Discussion of Opinion of Probable Cost:

As part of the evaluation of options to meet the proposed temperature limits an analysis was completed to determine the capital cost to purchase and install a new cooling tower system. Conceptual engineering was completed based on an area selected on the Argo site as the most likely location for a new Sanitary & Ship Canal water cooling tower.

A candidate cooling tower was selected by providing rough design parameters to an established cooling tower vendor, Marley Cooling Towers, of SPX Cooling Technologies, Inc. Pumps for supplying and discharging water from the cooling tower were selected using hydraulic calculations based on engineering judgment for the proposed site. Using the electrical power requirements for the selected cooling tower and pumps, a material take-off for electrical power distribution equipment and wiring was created. Finally, an estimated quantity of concrete and steel required for the cooling tower basin and pump and cooling tower supports along with a rack system for supporting pipe and conduit was generated.

The opinion of probable cost for complete installation was based on a combination of budgetary equipment quotes, engineering material take-offs and the use of ICARUS cost estimating database. The opinion of probable cost for this system is approximately $23,645,000. Based on a risk analysis, there is a 90% confidence level that the scope of work as described will not exceed this opinion of probable cost.

Section 4 – Conclusion

The cooling tower alternative was chosen for more in depth study than the other two alternatives due to the wide application for removal of heat from water and the belief that this would allow the continued use of Sanitary & Ship Canal water by economically bringing the returned Sanitary & Ship Canal water into temperature compliance with the proposed limits. The cost of this alternative is approximately $23,645,000. Additional capital investment as well as increased operating and maintenance costs would be incurred as this technology was not found to be sufficient to assure compliance on a consistent basis.

Background:

The objective of the estimating project was to develop a Total Installed Probable Cost for an order of magnitude (OOM) accuracy for the engineering, equipment, and installation to cool Canal Water after use and prior to return to the S&S Canal to reduce the mixing zone temperature gradients.

Currently, Corn Products International (CPI) uses canal water as a cooling media. Water is returned to the canal at a temperature no higher than 92 °F. Recently, the IEPA enacted regulation to reduce the mixing zone area for water returned to the canal with the net effect of reducing the allowable return temperature. Reasonable return temperature control technology is a multi-cell cooling tower with an approach temperature of no less than 12 F°. Using the 12 F° approach to wet bulb as the basis, design proposals should keep outfall temperatures below the period average requirements cited on Page 147 of 163 in the

Also, regarding the feasibility to meet the daily maximum °F limits indicated in the document. CPI efforts will continue to locate relevant historical data to indicate both how this is to be measured and reported as well as how this is defined. For the purposes of this estimate it is assumed that the daily maximum means an average over a day, and does not mean a momentary limit. The feasibility of complying with momentary excursions seems improbable. Within a 24 hour period staying below the limits is more probable. Data compiled by the University of Chicago that suggests that from 1997 to 2001, 154 hours per year have wet bulb temps in excess of 75°F. See Appendix A

Estimation Basis & Considerations from Engineering disciplines

The average use rate of canal water is 30,000 gpm with peak capacity of 45,000 gpm. The main canal water supply and return header is 42"φ. The CPI selected locations on the Argo site in Bedford Park, are sketched into the plan view and form the basis upon which the estimate has been prepared.

Process

The following is the design basis for the conceptual layouts of the cooling tower, basin and hot and cold wells and pump houses:

1. The valves for bypass service will be manual operated.
2. Magnesium Sulfate for de chlorination will be adjusted manually as chlorine monitoring indicates.
3. Pump controls will be designed to handle changes in level and flow as well as stage pump usage as one pump is able to be out of service under the design basis flows.
4. Biocide and additional water treatment for the tower will be per recommendations of the tower cooler supplier if approved for use in surface water discharge systems.

Mechanical / Piping

The following is the design basis for the conceptual layouts of the cooling tower, basin and hot and cold wells and pump houses: A summary equipment list is contained in the Aspen ICARUS estimation documentation.

1. The physical dimensions of the cooling tower are based on the Marley Tower data sheet dated 8/14/2007. The tower performance is based on a 40,000 gpm (not 45,000 gpm) flow rate, EWT 112 deg F and LWT 90 deg F (not 87 deg F) when EAT 78 deg Fwb. An alternative quote was secured from BAC to confirm design considerations and price range.

2. Using the proposed Marley Tower configuration, the cooling tower basin and cold well plan will be 55' W x 180' L (= 55' W x 97' L tower basin plus 55' W x 83' L cold well). The bottom elevation of C/T basin is about 7'-6" deep, the bottom of cold well will be about 11'-6" deep, plus four (4) 20' W x 20' L x 4'-0" deep pump pits from the bottom of the cold well. The overall water volume of the tower basin and cold well is about 480,000 gallons, which is equivalent to a 12 minute water flow volume through the cooling tower (= 12 minutes * 40,000 gpm).
3. Four (4) cold well pumps (vertical submersible model, 15,000 gpm x 102 ft wc, with VFD control, each) will be placed above the cold well within a pump house (about 55' W x 50' L x 12' H). The pump house will be heated and cooled to maintain the adequate space temperatures in summer and winter.
4. The hot well tank dimensions will be 50 ft diameter x 32 ft high. (it may be necessary to adjust height for existing pipe rack elevation). The tank will be of an open type, welded steel construction with external insulation. The overall water volume of the hot well is about 480,000 gallons, which is equivalent to a 12 minute water flow volume of the cooling tower (= 12 minutes * 40,000 gpm).
5. Four (4) hot well pumps (horizontal model, 15,000 gpm x 162 ft wc with VFD control, each) will be placed in a pump house (about 40' W x 50' L x 14' H). The pump house will be heated and cooled to maintain the adequate space temperatures in summer and winter.
6. The cold well will not have an overflow pipe connection to the site sewer. When all cold well pumps are failed for any reasons, while the canal water supply pumps and hot well pumps are continuously running, the tower water in the cold well and tower basin will over flow to the surrounding railroad track area.
To prevent the cold well pump failure and subsequent overflow,
  - a) Provide site wide alarms for a high water level in the cold well.
  - b) Modify the existing automatic canal water return side pressure regulator valve, which is currently located near the pipe rack, to be closed when the alarm is activated.
7. The required tower basin for the proposed Marley Tower is 55.5 ft wide x 97 ft long, while the tower structure is 76.46 ft wide x 96.67 ft long. The basin appears to be fit within the space between the railroad tracks. The space between the above ground tower structure and the railroad track on the both sides of the tower will be only 14'-6" approximately (this will be verified at the design stage). If the reserved space between the new tower and railroad track is too tight, a different tower configuration will be provided at the design stage.
8. A de-chlorination (magnesium-sulfate injection) system will be provided for the water from the cold well to the canal. The mag-sulfate charging house (12' W x 10' L x 10' H) will be heated and ventilated.
A combination safety shower and eye-wash station and an associated tempered water supply unit will be provided in the mag-sulfate water treatment house.

Electrical & Power

The following is the design basis for the conceptual layouts for the power and electrical needs for the cooling tower, pumping systems and ancillary services.

1. There is an existing cable tray running above ground from the power house to building 44. We are to assume the cable tray has room for the cables required for both new substations.
2. For the new hotwell substation run a short section of cable tray from the existing tray to the primary of the new outdoor transformer. Run busduct from the new transformer secondary to the new switchgear inside the new substation.
3. For the new coldwell substation extend the existing cable tray from the midpoint of building 44 to the South West corner of building 44. At that point run underground to new coldwell substation.

4. From the power house run a feeder to each of two new transformers (a total of two feeders from the power house per substation [4 total] )feeding a main-tie-main switchgear configuration for each new substation.
5. The power house transformer secondary is 12.47kV. The new substation transformers will be 12.47/ 4.16 kV. The motors will utilize a voltage of 4.16 kV.
6. The two new substations shall be block construction built on site (not a pre-fab building). The new transformers will be installed outside of the new substation switchgear.
7. No communication/data scope has been identified, and therefore is not included in this proposal
8. No electric heat trace scope has been identified, and therefore is not included in this proposal
9. No lightning protection and fire protection scope has been identified, and therefore is not included in this proposal

C/S/A

The following are the design basis for the structural sketches:

1. The Cooling Tower basin is a concrete subterranean structure 97'-0" x 55'-0" x 8'-0" deep with interior 18" square concrete columns supporting the Cooling Tower Equipment above. The basin extends to the west with a cold well, 83'-0" x 55'-0" x 11'-6" deep which has a concrete deck/slab on top supporting the Pump House and Pipe Rack above. The concrete deck/slab is supported by 18" x 30" columns and 18" x 24" beams. The well has four 20'-0" x 20'-0" x 4'-0" deep pits.
2. The Pump House, which encloses the electrical equipment also, is a 55'-0" x 75'-0" x 14'-0" high building with CMU walls, and metal deck on steel beams roof. The building is partially supported by the cold well concrete deck/slab and partially by continuous footings.
3. The transformers are located next to the Pump House and are covered by a metal deck on beams roof. Concrete pads for the transformers and a curb at the perimeter of the area need to be provided.
4. The Pipe Rack supporting the mechanical pipes has an approximate length of 200'-0" and it is composed of steel columns, beams and braces. The structure is passing over the double railroad with a 30'-0" span and is mainly supported by combined footings, since the columns are located at 10'-0" in the cross section.
5. The Hot Well structure is a 70'-0" x 32'-0", 14'-0" high building with CMU walls, metal deck on steel beams roof and continuous footings. The 50'-0" diameter tank is supported by a ring foundation with an 8" concrete slab on grade in the center.

The basis for the estimating is detailed within the Aspen ICARUS document along with summary equipment lists.

Steve

Here are my notes from our telephone call with the client.

- 1 There is an existing cable tray running above ground from the power house to building 44. We are to assume the cable tray has room for the cables required for both new substations.
- 2 For the new hotwell substation run a short section of cable tray from the existing tray to the primary of the new outdoor transformer. Run busduct from the new transformer secondary to the new switchgear inside the new substation.
- 3 For the new coldwell substation extend the existing cable tray from the midpoint of building 44 to the South West corner of building 44. At that point run underground to new coldwell substation.
- 4 From the power house run a feeder to each of two new transformers (a total of two feeders from the power house per substation [4 total] )feeding a main-tie-main switchgear configuration for each new substation.
- 5 The power house transformer secondary is 12.47kV. The new substation transformers will be 12.47/ 4.16 kV. The motors will utilize a voltage of 4.16 kV.
- 6 The two new substations shall be block construction built on site (not a pre-fab building). The new transformers will be installed outside of the new substation switchgear.
